Romania and Euro-Atlantic Integration

Since the fall of communism, the expansion of the NATO Alliance into Eastern Europe has been the subject of much discussion in international political circles. Despite the fact that it was the first country to join the Partnership for Peace, prior to 1996 Romania received little attention as a potential alliance partner. In large measure this was due to incorrect perceptions and a general lack of information about the important progress that this country has made in meeting the criteria established for membership in the alliance: a demonstrated commitment to democracy; progress in the creation of a market economy; respect for human rights and the rights of ethnic minorities; good relations with neighboring countries; and assuring civilian control over the armed forces. The present volume discusses the important progress Romania has made since the fall of communism and the significant contribution the country can make to peace and security in Europe as a member of the NATO alliance. Includes references. Published by The Center for Romanian Studies (Iasi / Oxford / Portland, OR).
