A Man In Transition K. L. Belvin

A Man In Transition tells a story in poetry and prose of a misogynistic gigolo, reckless father, ego maniac turned, devoted husband, educator, and role model. What do you call a man who cheated on his wife numerous times, fathered multiple children, was driven by his ego, drank and partied as if there wasn't a tomorrow and even turned one of his children into the police? Today he is a devoted husband who loves his wife with each breath. Takes care of all his children and honors his responsibilities. He holds a Master's degree in education and founded the Lord. He now spends his time trying to heal others who were on the same path he was to destruction. You would call him; A Man in Transition . Through poetry, short stories and observations, K. L. gives you a glimpse into his life as misogynistic adult, turned master of education. Reared by his mother, grandmother, and for a short time great grandmother KL opens a window into the interpretations of life from the perspective of an educator. Teaching today's young black males growing up without their fathers or significant male role models he uses poetry to show masculinity instead of the usual choices available to so many. A Man in Transition; speaks to the center of this changed man's heart while providing a glimpse into a past that will make you shake your head. A Man in Transition , A collection of poems, stories and observations written by a New York City Teacher, Keith Belvin (K.L.), who gained media attention when he turned his daughter in after viewing a video of her and her friends assaulting a passenger on the subway
